

What is P-H-M Excellence?

At Penn-Harris-Madison School Corporation, we consider it a privilege to teach the students of our community.

Providing award-winning educational programs starts with excellent teachers. Our educators have a thirst for learning, receiving continuous training in order to equip our students with the skills they need to succeed in college, their careers, and beyond.

A P-H-M education extends outside our school walls with our students participating in project-based learning activities and top-level competitions from world robotics championships to national academic and state athletic championships. Students have the opportunity to learn about globalization by experiencing it through international educational travel and immersion programs.

Students excel when excellence is provided in vibrant, interactive learning environments alive with cultural diversity.

That is what a P-H-M education provides ...
